THE REPORT

Of the Board of Inquiry on Its Way to the National Capital.

The Cabinet Meeting Tuesday Devoted Exclusively to the Spanish Situation in General-The Board of Inquiry Report Will Be Made Public Monday.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—The cabinet meeting Tuesday lasted something over an hour and was devoted exclusively and to the forthcoming report of the the same day. court of inquiry in particular. The tone of the discussion was very firm and determined that there must come an end to the present state of affairs in Cuba. Secretary Long authorized the statement that the understand. ing before the cabinet was that the report would reach Washington on next Thursday or Friday; that it was very voluminous and that its publication and transmission to congress would not occur until Monday or Tuesday, as the president would require that much time to give the document the mature consideration that momentous character required. Other cabinet officers stated that general plan included the sending of a presidential message along with the report stating that Spain had been called upon to make suitable response to the case presented by the court of inquiry. While the cabinet associates of the president maintained their usual reserve as to the exact character of their deliberations, yet it was conceded that he discussion proceeded on the theory that the coming report would show that the Maine explosion was not the all his cabinet both as to the Maine ship Kentucky. question and the general subject of NEWPORT NEWS, Va., March 24 .-

KEY WEST, Fla., March 23.-The United States court of inquiry into the loss of the battleship Maine has at last finished its laborious work of investigating the disaster and has submitted its report to Rr. Adm. Sicard. He has pointed out some alterations which he considers necessary and the report may be taken to Washington by Lieut. Commander Marix, judge advocate of the court. It is possible, however, that its arrival in Washington may be delayed several days longer, as Adm. Sicard said Monday night:

"I could scarcely say that the report will leave Wednesday. The court has practically finished its work, but some details may engage its attention long enough to keep the report here for several days. I trust, however, that the navy department will have the documents in a very short time."

From the general tone of his remarks it might be inferred that the court findings do not definitely solve the mystery of the explosion. This is further borne out by the admiral's statement that even after the report had been sent to Washington the department may require further investi-

All rumors as to the report being already on its way to Washington were set at rest Monday afternoon when Judge Advocate Marix walked into the hotel and asked for Adm. Sicard.

In the little writing room of the hotel Lieut. Marix personally delivered the report to Adm. Sicard. Commander West, of Adm. Sicard's staff, then joined Lieut. Marix and the trio walked up sairs to the admiral's rooms. For two hours they were closeted together, going over the voluminous papers. Lieut. At 2 o'clock the consideration of the national quarantine bill was resumed. The recognize the independence of the reconference report on the agricultural bill was adopted. After a brief executive session the senate at 4:30 adjourned until Monday.

House-No political questions were discussed in the house Thursday. The whole session was devoted strictly to the post office appropriation bill which was taken up for amendment under the five minute rule. The questions which consumed the major portion of the time related to the allowance for clerk hire at post offices and to rural free delivery. The house increased the allowance for rural free delivery from $150,000 to $300,000 and defeated the proposition for increased clerk hire.

WASHINGTON, March 19.-SENATE-Not in

House-The house spent another day on the post office appropriation bill, but only disposed of two pages of the bill. Most of the day was devoted to a debate on the merits of the pneumatic tube mail service in New York, Boston and Philadelphia, and the advisability of continuing the existing contract. An effort to strike out the appropriation of $225,000 was defeated, but the opponents of the appropriation succeeded in securing the adoption of an amendment providing that no additional contracts should be made. An amendment was adopted making it a misdemeanor for any person to "pad" the mails during the period when the mails are being weighed to determine the compensation to be paid to the railroads for their transportation. The amendment was recommended by the depart-

WASHINGTON, March 22.-SENATE--After the transaction of some routine business Monday, Mr. Bacon (Ga.) introduced an amendment which he announced he would offer to the resolution providing for the annexation of the Hawaiin Islands to the United States. There was quite a spirited debate over an amendment suggested by Mr. Cannon to give the survivors each a year's pay out of hand instead of attempting to reimburse them for actual losses. Some old alleged scandals the survivors of the Samoan disaster was raked up, but the debate in the end was saved from a rather sordid tone by a beautiful tribute paid to the gallant dead by Mr. Cousins (Ia.) in a short but eloquent speech. CUBAN INDEPENDENCE.

Resolution to That Effect Introduced in the House-Contested Election Cases Decided in Thorpe's Favor-Spanish Crisis Near at Hand.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Representative A. Clark, of Missouri, Wednesday introduced the following resolution:

That the congress of the United States of America participate with the people of the United States in the deep interest which they feel for the success of the people of Cuba who are struggling to establish their liberty and independence, and do hereby public of Cuba.

The feeling was universal throughout official circles Wednesday that the culmination of the Spanish crisis was near at hand. With the report of the court of inquiry only the little while off, with the white house the center of long and earnest conferences between the president and the party leaders of congress, and with exceptional activity towards emergency preparations in the war and navy departments, there was abundance of evidence that definite results regarding the Maine disaster and the Cuban question in general were about to be reached. R. T. Thorpe was Wednesday given the seat from the Fourth Virginia district. Sydney E. Eppes, who obtained the certificate of election, was unseated by a strict party vote. Thorpe was given the seat by a vote of 151 to 130. The republicans without a break voted for Thorpe and the democrats and populists, with the exception of Howard he could write a successful popular song. (Ala.), a populist, voted for Eppes. Thorpe contested the seat of McKenny in the last congress and was seated.

Mr. Gallinger's speech followed. He spoke in a low, clear tone of voice, distinctly audible throughout the chamber. There was not an interruption by word throughout his speech. His auditors listened intently to his the truth. The remainder of the day was oc- ties suffered by the reconcentrados. When he deelared, however, that a government that would starve 400,000 of its people would do anything, and be atoned for with gold or silver, a spontaneous wave of applause swept over the galleries and the vice president had difficulty in restoring order. When he had concluded he was accorded a burst of applause which the vice president made little effort to restrain.

best medicine in the world," you can allow something for seeming extravagance in the statement if you know that the medicine so praised, cured a loved daughter of disease and restored to her the eyesight nearly lost. The best medicine in the world for you is the medicine that cures you. There can't be anything better. No medicine can do more than cure. That is why John S. Goode, of Orrick, Mo., writes in these strong terms:

"Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best medicine in the world. My daughter had a relapse after the measles, due to taking cold. She was nearly blind, and was obliged to remain in a dark room all the time. The doctors could give her no relief; one of them directed me to give her Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Two bottles cured her com-

CHAPTER XIII.

A groom was sent to Twineburgh for a doctor. This was contrary to Mr. Morley's wish. He insisted that a doctor was not necessary, and it was only to appease the anxiety of his daughter that he finally consented to see a medical man.

But all the daughter's entreaties could not move him to go to bed. He lay down on the couch in the library, and Florence sat beside him, holding one of his hands. I left them thus together and went outside.

Before I left the man's voice had resumed much of its usual vigor. For one who had seemed to be as near collarse as he, strength returned very rapidly.

Notwithstanding my pity for Florence, there was great pride and joy in my heart. The sweetest girl in the world was mine. All troubles, mysteries, the heart-sickness of the past year, seemed petty and trivial beside this thought. Mr. Morley had given his consent to our marriage; indeed, it was an absolute command.

The scene under the trees came back to me, and I could not repress a shudder as I thought of the father's horrible premonitions and the overwhelming effect produced by them.

I walked about the grounds or reclined on one of the many seats scattered around, determined to await the doctor's arrival. My mind would constantly revert to the secret trouble which was so evident and powerful a factor in Mr. Morley's life; and what it matter for speculation. The great motive and influence in the father's life, I knew, was his love for his only child. Therefore it seemed that the hidden trouble must arise from some sorrow or danger which threatened Florence. The thought caused me considerable uneasiness.

I had not realized how morbidly sensitive the robbery had made me, until now. All the unfathomed events and incidents which had occurred during the two days I had been here seemed in some indefinable way connected with the affair, or the result of it.

The doctor arrived much sooner than I had expected. Indeed, the idea of giving medical advice to a great man like Mr. Morley was incentive strong enough to cause a country physician to kill his horse in the endeavor to reach the patient as quickly as possible.

After quite a time spent over Mr. Morley, the doctor stepped out on the porch, and, drawing on his gloves, delayed his departure to answer a few questions which Florence, who had followed, put to him. It was impossible for the worthy physician to conceal wholly his sense of importance, although he tried to appear as though it was by no means an unusual thing to be found administering potions to millionaires.

Florence anxiously listened to his words of advice, and then withdrew. I had some hope of speaking to her, but she only bestowed on me a sad, sweet smile, which told of her love for me as well as her anxiety for the father, and with that I had to be content.

As the doctor was returning immediately to Twineburgh, I proposed to accompany him. He expressed his pleasure in having a companion, and climbed into the carriage beside him.

I was anxious to tell Sonntag of the murderous attack upon me. On the way, finding the worthy doctor willing to answer questions, I was soon possessed of his opinion of my lawyer and agent. This opinion was a very high Nevertheless, I felt that he was to be trusted. I felt safe in his hands. My own opinion being so heartily corroborated by the doctor made me all the more satisfied.

But my trust and confidence in the old lawyer soon received a shock.

I retraced my steps to the lawyer's office. The old fellow was standing in the door and seemed to have been highly diverted by witnessing the chase, to reveal. judging by his face.

"The rascal! the villain!" I exclaimed, pushing past the lawyer into him, I'll wring his neck!"

Sonntag closed the door and then turned toward me. "What have you against him?" he asked.

I recounted the shooting incident, to which Sonntag listened with a whimsical expression.

"H'm! And he shot at you when you called him Skinner, eh?" he remarked, when I had finished. "Must be something in his former life; but then-well, it's strange, certainly. Why, I always address him as Skinner, and he never attempted to shoot me; indeed, he never seemed to notice."

"Then it is evident his attempt to shoot me was not for my calling him by his right name. See here, Mr. Sonntag," I continued, earnesly, "do you suppose he is in any way concerned in the cellar affair?"

"Who, Skinner? Good gracious, no! that is, I can't say, but I think not." "What were you talking to him about?" I asked, eying the old fellow with some impatience, for the more I conversed with him the less I could understand him.

"Oh, about a matter of freight," my agent replied, indifferently. "It was trivial, then?"

"Yes, yes, of no importance what-

"Mr. Sonntag, it is from no wish to know the subject of your conversation with that wretch of a Skinner that I ask the question. But I happened to see you just before I entered the office, and I am a trifle curious to know if you usually speak as earnestly on unimportant topics as you evidently did to him.'

The lawyer regarded me a moment He seemd to be debating some question

"Was I earnest?" he finally inquired. "Everything about me seems to be mysterious!" I exclaimed, piqued to impatience at his wholly dodging my question. "There's one mystery that will be cleared up soon, however," I added, decidedly.

"Yes? And that is-" "The cellar mystery."

Sonntag again cautioned me against being too precipitate.

"Then give me some good reason for your caution!" I exclaimed. "It's getwas that could so affect a gentleman of | ting monotonous following people's adhis standing and wealth furnished me | vice without having a reason for so doing. I'll do so no more. I have half a notion to get out of the place. Ever since my arirval, petty trivial circumstances have harassed me and kept me in an irritable mood."

> "Well, maybe it would be best for you to visit some of your friends in town," Sonntag said, reflectively, "if only for a few days."

> "No, sir. I have no friends, and your seeming desire to have me away makes me the more determined to stay. But a course of supineness is done with. Now I'll take the reins, and see what is to be made out of the driving."

"Just as you please about that, of course, Mr. Conway. But I do beg of you, and it is for your own interests I speak, delay the attempt to enter the cellar until to-morrow."

"Why?" I curtly asked. "You'll know in the morning," my lawyer replied, with a smile.

"I may be dead by that time," I replied. "Certainly if I must be the target for every assassin's bullet, my coffin might as well be ordered now.' Saying which, I took my own pistol from my pocket. "You see that? Well, it means that after this I'll be as handy with a pistol as others are."

Mr. Sonntag eyed me rather suspiciously, as though not at all certain but that I would level the weapon at

How do I know but what that cellar under my room has been used, maybe is being used, for some criminal purpose? If that is true, my arrival in Nelsonville and taking up my abode right in the midst of hidden crime would naturally prevent any continuance of operations, and endanger the secret. I believe that attempts are if the other face I had seen belonged to being made to cause me to leave; if mysterious demonstrations cannot accomplish it by frightening me, then

When I was conversing with Mr. Sonntag there was something about him which compelled me to feel trust and confidence, notwithstanding his many sayings bearing on some secret purpose which he was so careful not

"Pardon me for seeming impertinent," Sonntag said, as he accompanied me to the door, "but have you seen Miss Morley since your arrival?"

"Yes." "And everything is all right?"

"Yes." "You intend marrying her?"

"I have her father's consent." "Ah! I congratulate you." Sonntag extended his hand and smiled. But the smile died away immediately, and the expression which followed strangely disturbed me. Was it sorrow? For what? Or was it pity? Surely not pity for me!

I went from the office resolved to follow my lawyer's advice just this once. To-morrow was not far distant, and I would know all then. Wondering very much what this all would prove to be, I started on my five-mile walk homeward. Fortunately, I encountered Sarah, who had driven to Twineburgh to do some trading, and who was just climbing into her wagon as I came up. "Hello, Sarah," I called, as she was about to take up the lines. "Will you give me a lift?" She looked around in surprise, then expressed her pleasure at seeing me see the station agent at work on the platform handling some freight. The fellow really seemed to be ubiquitous. I had encountered him in Nelsonville, in Sonntag's office, and now again at the station attending to his duties.

His back was toward us and he did not notice the wagon and its occupants. Sarah pulled up the team at my request and I climbed down from the wagon. I was curious to note again what effect my presence would have on the fellow. When I had moved some distance from the team (for I did not propose to endanger Sarah's life in case he took it into his head to fire at me again), placing my hand on my revolver as it rested in my pocket, called to him:

"Hello, there! I say, you, Skinner!" The fellow dropped the truck handles and turned quickly. Then he fled swiftly along the platform toward the door of the station house, through which he bolted.

But I was not watching him. His flight and the manner of it was perceived simply because his form was in the line of vision.

It was upon the bow-window in the telegraph office that my gaze was fixed. For, at my hail, a face had appeared at that window, and then was quickly withdrawn.

Did my sight deceive me, or was it really the face of Horace Jackson?

Following a natural impulse, I sprang upon the platform and went to the door. It was locked. Then I tried the door leading into the ladies' waiting-room, but that was also locked. I walked around the place a few times and peered into each window, but no one was to be seen.

It was no surprise that the fellow Skinner should wish to avoid me, but Jackson, why should he desire to hide from me?

Probably Jackson, having heard that I was residing at Nelsonville, and knowing that I must therefore have met you say," Sonntag remarked, after a Florence Morley and have been informed by her of his contemptible manner of trying to win her, thought it best not to meet me. If he wished to avoid me he was at "What? Make no defense against liberty to do so. It was a trivial eircumstance, at any rate, and so I left the platform and climbed back upon the

Sarah was much puzzled at the occurrence, and made numerous remarks and asked many questions in the endeavor to obtain more light; but I did not gratify her curiosity and answered ony in monosyllables.

I could not restrain a burst of laughter at the idea of the great powerful farmer being courageous only in his wife's presence. Sarah joined heartily in my merriment, and remarked that her husband could be relied upon to do just what she desired.

PLAYED BY SECOND VIOLIN.

Impromptu Serenade Delights the People of a Lake Front Home. On the North side, in the shadow of one of the fine residences close to the lake front, a couple of Italians were standing, one of them with a violin in his hands and the other holding a harp. They were playing one of the popular waltz tunes of the day, and as the windows of the house were opened to the summer night the strains of the music floated in to where the occupants were seated. While the waltz was still in the midst of its swing, a tall man, in a long cloak enveloping him, and a silk hat on his head, came around the corner. He paused for a moment, and then going over to where the Italians were standing, he produced one dollar and said to the men: "Let me play them a serenade. I play second violin down-

In his hands the tall man carried a violin case. It was only a minute's work for him to get his violin out, and he laid it to his cheek and began to play. His long right arm, with a wonderfully swift, smooth sweep, coursed up and down the strings with the fying bow, and the music leaped from the magic shell and fled away into the night. Higher and higher the eches rose, the heavy chords of the G string mingling with the shrill wailings of the high notes, and the very air around and about the player seemed charged with melody. In the house the people at first spoke questioningly, and then sat mute, four ing to lose a note of the marvelous flow of melody. During several recent sparking trips to the country a Paris youth who is well known in younger circles of local society, has had three amusing experi ences. When he returned from the first visit he was followed to Paris by family horse, and on the second trip pet fox terrier stole a ride to town in his buggy. While taking the object of his admiration a drive during the third visit their cooversation was interrupted by the cackling of a hen in the back of the buggy. She was not laughing at the conversation, however, but did it just to announce that she had played a joke on the young man. She had been laying for him that day.

acknowledged to be one of the best fellows. His penchant, however, for practical joking, though it never savored of malice, gained as a rule more censure than appreciation. For one reason, his jokes were not always in good taste; and the case in point will serve as an illustration. It took the form, first of all, of an advertisement in one of the dailies, to wit:

print, wondering, with curious interest, what sort of replies he would get, and how he should treat them. Although, literally speaking, he was unattached - that is to say, although there was no spoken engagement between him and his old playmate and friend, Nellie Marsh -he felt that he was sufficiently idolized by that lady, and sufficiently under the spell of her charms, to defy the possible influence of any of the applicants, however, fascinating.

Moreover, as his income was at present too modest to permit of his marrying anybody, he went into the jest with a double sense of safety.

The replies were several, and, on the whole, not interesting. Most of them turned 30, though." were from matrimonial agents, who promised, for reasonable fees, to procure him the necessary introduction, while guaranteeing their clients' amiability and every other virtue. While rummaging among his collection of photos a day or two previous he had come across one of a club acquaintance, a Mr. Pellingham, which had reached him on some forgotten occasion, probably through a third party. At this direct challenge the lady' eyes widened with astonishment. "You N MANY respects Tom Brunner was are the Mr. Pellingham that wrote to me, are you not?" she asked.

It was his turn to look astonished "Wrote to you," he repeated. "Certainly not. I don't understand. I'm afraid there is some mistake."

He read it, and looked up with a smile "I am not responsible for this, I assure you."

"Well, what a stupid jest!" "I quite agree with you."

There was a pause, each looked at the other and tried to appear very much annoyed. It was a failure, however, and they both laughed.

In the meantime, also, among strange faces in strange lands, he had missed very keenly the society of his ideal, Nellie Marsh; and the many pleasant recollections he indulged in concerning her had all the more charm for him now that he was at length in a position to confess his love. He turned, and his heart gave a leap of delight. "Nellie! What a fortunate meeting!"

The surrounding commotion prevented any display of sentiment. He managed, however, to explain the cause of his absence, and convey to her some idea of his recent success; whereat she looked at him proudly, and smiled with all her cld kindliness, as she said:

"I can't tell you how delighted I am, Tom; but I'm not surprised to hear of your getting on. You know I've always believed in you.' "Of course you have, Nellie," he re-

"Well, once upon a time-that is to say, about a month ago-some person or persons unknown put a matrimonial advertisement in a daily paper."

He gave a start, and looked at her sharply; but her eyes were wandering for the moment, and she continued: "Now, it happened that a very intimate friend of mine, named Miss Townshend, answered the advertisement for the fun of the thing, and gave the address of her milliner, whom she took into her confidence."

"Well?" he asked, prepared by this time for further surprises.

"Well, what do you think, Tom? The advertisement turned out to be a huge hoax; and instead of meeting the advertiser, as arranged, the lady made the acquaintance of a Mr. Alfred Pelling-

"Pellingham? I fancy I know the gentleman."

"You see, he kept the appointment out of sheer curiosity, not knowing who the lady was, or why she had written to him. Of course, the joker had written to her, first of all, from the wrong address. I hope you follow me?"

"Of course I follow you. But, I say, Nellie, what on earth has all this-" "Wait a minute, I'm coming to the denouement, as they say in the novels." "Pardon me," said Tom, with a smile,

I think I can guess the sequel. Your lady friend and Mr. Pellingham fell desperately in love at the first meetin, and have met several times since; with the result that they are now engaged to be married?"

"They are married." "Really! that is a romance. I suppose, Nellie, you were the principal ordesmaid?"

"Oh, Tom," she exclaimed, with humorous petulence, "how very stupid you are! Miss Townshend never existed. She's a myth. Don't you see, that was the name that I assumed when I answered that advertisement?"

"You?" he gasped. "Yes, I, Tom," she replied; adding some words of friendly parting, which were a vague recollection by the time the 'bus had whirled her out of sight, and he had begun to realize the truth. "She was right," he groaned, "I am very stupid."-Tit-Bits.

Carson and the Buffalo.

Kit Carson, while with Fremont's expedition, had an experience similar to that of a tiger-hunter in India, when the tiger hunts the hunter. While hunting to get "meat" for the expedition, Carson chased a buffalo bull. On coming up to the bull's side, Carson fired. just as his horse stepped into a prairiedog hole. Kit went 15 feet over the horse's head. The bull, maddened by the bullet, which had struck low under the shoulder, chased the hunter, who ran toward the river. Every foot of valuable ground, or ground believed to be valuable, within 75 miles of Dawson, in any direction, is staked. It is staked to last water, even to the tops of the trees, as the old Klondikers express it. The miners' real mining work begins at Dawson. Unless he has money to buy a claim already staked, or to buy provisions and wood to enable him to get a lay from a claim owner, he must travel 75 miles from Dawson in order to prospect on ground which has not been taken up. Buying to his general physical condition, and find is an expensive luxury, as claims are the same to be all that could be desired, held all the way from $10,000 to $1,000,-000. To get a lay the miner must have money enough to buy wood at from $25 to $65 a cord and provisions at an average of 75 cents a pound. The cheapest course open to the miner is to prospect on his own account. That requires, as has been said, a journey of 75 miles from Dawson, over a hilly and mountainous country. Then the prospector must take his chances. He may make a stake and he may not. It is all speculation.-Chicago Inter Ocean.

WOMEN AS COMPOSERS.

Publishers Say Their Manuscripts

Far Outnumber Those by Men. . A prominent publisher tells me that where, some years ago, only about onetenth of the manuscripts submitted were by women, now their manuscripts outnumber those of the men two to one. Very few people care to be undertakers, While this ratio will not hold in published compositions, the rivalry is close even there. Women are writing all sorts of music. A. Simmons Liver Medicine, made from the purest and most carefully selected Drugs, regardless of cost, with the Bulbs of the Roots and Stems of the Herbs by our secret process extracted and thrown away, cannot be sold at less than 25 cents. - The reason of the difference is this: On June 30th, 1893, the Supreme Court enjoined J. H. Zeilin & Co. from manufacturing and selling medicine under the name of "Dr. Simmons' Liver Medicine. Zeilin's answer to our bill said, the medicine was designed as "cheap negro medicine for the negroes of the Mississippi Valley." And Zeilin's manager testified in the case, and Zeilin's advertisements said "that all the Liver Medicine they make is made by the same formula." What more conclusive evidence could there be that all their Liver Medicine is "cheap negro medicine?"

Again, the United States Court, in the Zeilin case at Knoxville, Tenn., enjoined the old proprietors of the article now called "Black Draught" from perpetrating fraud by using the words constituting our trade name, and "Black Draught" was not known till after 1876; yet they falsely advertise that it was established in 1840, and filch our trade by allowing their customers to untruthfully represent it as the same as our genuine article, they giving color of truth to the deception by publishing the picture of a Dr. Simmons on their wrapper, thereby associating their article with our Dr. M. A. Simmons' Liver Medicine, which he established in 1840, and every package of which has borne his picture since 1800. On receipt of letter enclosing a recently Sabcock & for thirty years of the Babcock & Auburn, says: "I Munsel Carriage Co., of Auburn, says: "I write to express my gratitude for the miraclous benefit received from Dr. Miles' Heart Cure. I suffered for years, as result of army life, from sciatica which affected my heart in the worst form, my limbs swelled from the ankles up. I bloated until I was unable to button my clothing; had sharp pains about the heart, smothering spells and shortness of breath. For three months I was unable to lie down, and all the sleep I got was in an arm chair. I was treated by the best dectors but gradually grew worse. About a year ago I commenced taking Dr.
